Pope John XXIII’s most significant contribution to the Church was calling the Second Vatican Council. In Peace on Earth, he emphasized the need for universal peace and the right to life for all people.

The modernist movement describes the period during the late 19th and early 20th centuries when many people began to think that human progress was the result of science and reason alone.

Pantheism is a belief that rejects a personal God and views God and the universe as being identical.

Pope Pius IX issued the Syllabus of Errors, which addressed modernist claims by citing 80 statements made by earlier popes. Although it offered clarifications about some of the dangers in modernist thought, it also reflected some of the Church’s own misgivings and fears about advances in science.

Pope Pius IX opened the First Vatican Council to clarify some of the Church’s teachings.

The First Vatican Council issued several important statements that defined papal infallibility. The definition began with a reminder that the pope has been promised the gift of the Holy Spirit.

The modernist movement describes the period during the late 19th and early 20th centuries when many people began to think that human progress was the result of science and reason alone.

Pantheism is a belief that rejects a personal God and views God and the universe as being identical.

Pope Pius IX issued the Syllabus of Errors, which addressed modernist claims by citing 80 statements made by earlier popes. Although it offered clarifications about some of the dangers in modernist thought, it also reflected some of the Church’s own misgivings and fears about advances in science.

The modernist movement describes the period during the late 19th and early 20th centuries when many people began to think that human progress was the result of science and reason alone.

Pantheism is a belief that rejects a personal God and views God and the universe as being identical.

Pope Pius IX issued the Syllabus of Errors, which addressed modernist claims by citing 80 statements made by earlier popes. Although it offered clarifications about some of the dangers in modernist thought, it also reflected some of the Church’s own misgivings and fears about advances in science.

The modernist movement describes the period during the late 19th and early 20th centuries when many people began to think that human progress was the result of science and reason alone.

Pantheism is a belief that rejects a personal God and views God and the universe as being identical.

Pope Pius IX issued the Syllabus of Errors, which addressed modernist claims by citing 80 statements made by earlier popes. Although it offered clarifications about some of the dangers in modernist thought, it also reflected some of the Church’s own misgivings and fears about advances in science.

The modernist movement describes the period during the late 19th and early 20th centuries when many people began to think that human progress was the result of science and reason alone.

Pantheism is a belief that rejects a personal God and views God and the universe as being identical.

Pope Pius IX issued the Syllabus of Errors, which addressed modernist claims by citing 80 statements made by earlier popes. Although it offered clarifications about some of the dangers in modernist thought, it also reflected some of the Church’s own misgivings and fears about advances in science.

The modernist movement describes the period during the late 19th and early 20th centuries when many people began to think that human progress was the result of science and reason alone.

Pantheism is a belief that rejects a personal God and views God and the universe as being identical.

Pope Pius IX issued the Syllabus of Errors, which addressed modernist claims by citing 80 statements made by earlier popes. Although it offered clarifications about some of the dangers in modernist thought, it also reflected some of the Church’s own misgivings and fears about advances in science.

The modernist movement describes the period during the late 19th and early 20th centuries when many people began to think that human progress was the result of science and reason alone.

Pantheism is a belief that rejects a personal God and views God and the universe as being identical.

Pope Pius IX issued the Syllabus of Errors, which addressed modernist claims by citing 80 statements made by earlier popes. Although it offered clarifications about some of the dangers in modernist thought, it also reflected some of the Church’s own misgivings and fears about advances in science.

The modernist movement describes the period during the late 19th and early 20th centuries when many people began to think that human progress was the result of science and reason alone.

Pantheism is a belief that rejects a personal God and views God and the universe as being identical.

Pope Pius IX issued the Syllabus of Errors, which addressed modernist claims by citing 80 statements made by earlier popes. Although it offered clarifications about some of the dangers in modernist thought, it also reflected some of the Church’s own misgivings and fears about advances in science.